

Pop Goes the World

In today's fast paced world, popular buzz words, trending videos, movies and songs are changing weekly. As young adults, there is value in understanding the context and meaning of these cultural topics to stay involved and included in current conversations. In our new program, Pop Goes the World, students will have fun delving into the motivating world of pop culture. Students will play a key role in planning and choosing themes that are discussed and unpacked in class. While engaged in these themes and topics, students will work on conversation and social skills, reading, writing, vocabulary and acquisition of cultural knowledge that will promote their abilities to contribute to conversations in their daily experiences.

There is no prerequisite reading level, but students who require one to one support must provide their own support. This program is taught by Aja Masters, who has been an Instructor and Summer Program Coordinator at DSRF for 5 years. Aja graduated from SFU with a major in Psychology and a minor in Learning and Developmental Disabilities and completed the Employment Supports Specialty Advanced Certificate at Douglas College.

**We intend to offer this as an in-person class but this may change to an online class due to COVID-19.*
