

Contacting your CYSN social worker

CYSN social workers provide services to families on AHP, or families who have written documentation of intellectual disability as assessed by a developmental psychologist. Services include respite, behaviour support, parent support groups, homemaker home support (for crisis), out of home living arrangements, and family supports through youth care workers and social skills groups. All services are voluntary, and family driven. Supports are not provided if the family does not request them and express interest. Due to waitlists for services, it is recommended to contact the social worker and request services even if the needs are not immediate.

Lower mainland CYSN social worker catchment areas: are pictured right, with addresses below. Some of these have been collapsed into one office (Vancouver Richmond).
